1. The Torzhok (57°03'N/35°01'E) airfield, Kalinin Oblast, is just east of the railroad station and the single-track railroad line. The airfield extended approximately 2½ km along the railroad line and was approximately 1½ km wide. There were red boundary lights, the level surroundings of the field had no trees. No runway or taxiways [redacted] The landing field had a short grass cover and apparently a firm subgrade, since heavy aircraft made flights at the field, even in bad weather. [redacted]

2. Two or three medium-sized permanent hangars with arched roofs and, adjacent to them, four or five temporary wooden buildings, probably quarters, were on the edge of the field. About 10 to 12 semi-underground containers were dispersed on the edge of the airfield. [REDACTED]

3. [REDACTED] the number of aircraft stationed at the field averaged 4 or 5 four-engine high-wing monoplanes, presumably with radial engines, 12 to 15 single-engine fighters, low-wing monoplanes with in-line engines, and 2 or 3 biplanes. [REDACTED]

4. Local formation flights were made with not more than 3 or 4 planes. Individual flights were occasionally made at night. [REDACTED]
